Case: The residents of a poor neighborhood are plagued with a drug problem. Five pushers operate openly on their streets and brazenly try to entice their children to take "free samples." A committee of residents has approached the police and begged them to arrest the pushers, but nothing has happened. There is reason to believe some of the police are sharing in the proceeds of the drug trade. Appeals to City Hall have fallen on deaf ears. State agencies have simply referred them back to their city government. The residents decide that their only hope for a safe and decent neighborhood for their children is to take the law into their own hands. Accordingly, one calm summer night they unceremoniously execute the five pushers. (from Ruggiero)

The Government Team must defend this proposition: The residents' action is morally acceptable.
